

I Apologize

What if the person you love is suddenly, tragically, taken from you? And, after years of living with that memory, the events that led to their death start all over again with someone new. Would you have the courage to embrace love, knowing that your world might be torn apart . . . and once again you were powerless to stop it? Tony Richardson is faced with such a decision. Will he choose love or let the demons of the past steal his second chance at happiness?
