Not illustrated. 1896 Excerpt: ...or old witch. Zelus longipes. Linn, is a pretty Heteropteron banded above with black and red. It frequents bushes where it feeds on insects. Sphictyrtus whitei. Guer. is red and bronze-green above, but when flying the former color alone shows. It is found in the same situations as the preceding species, but no notes were made of its feeding habits. None of the few Orthoptera secured are yet identified,. One large specie? belongs to the Acridiida; and is over two inches in length. Another is a Mantis, which, as it was seen in various stages, evidently breeds here. Of crickets a little Tridactylis or allied form was found in a well, and a large brownish species of undetermined genus is found in the caves among the loose rocks on the floors or in crannies far back o from the entrance. The antennae are immensely elongate. Cockroaches were seen in some numbers. The papery nests of two colonies of white ants were seen by the party on Eleuthera Island. One of these _was built on a horizontally projecting branch of a small tree a short distance from the ground; the other was built directly on the ground and was of such girth as to render its packing for transportation impracticable. We were confined at this station, as at the Dry Tortugas,. to shore and shallow-water collecting of marine forms. One of the most striking facts brought out by a survey of the Crustacea from this region is that the littoral and shallowwater species are in a majority of cases identical with those found on the other side of the Gulf Stream at the Dry Tortugas. Out of about eighteen species collected at Harbor Island and Spanish Wells, twelve are identical with species, from the Tortugas, leaving only one-third the number aspeculiar to Eleuthera. This is quite differen...
